An Ant Fifteen Years Old.

Sir John Lubbock the naturalist, has been experimenting to find out how long the common ant would live if kept out of harm's way, says the Scientific American. On August 8, 1885, an ant which had been thus kept and tenderly cared for died at the age of 15 years, which is the greatest age any species of insect has yet been known to attain. Another individual of the same species of ant lived to the advanced age of 13 years.

Animal Instinct at Fault.

Many persons still believe that the instinct of animals preserves them from certain accidents, and that they never eat anything that is injurious to them. Well-instructed persons have long known that in this regard animals are no better off than men. A chicken does not hesitate to drink paint; a cow partakes of water in which bags containing nitrate of soda have been washed; ducks strangle and choke in swallowing snails.

Causes Within Causes.

Ten thousand dollars is the sum Simon Applebaum of New York, wants Isaac Crabbage, a tailor, to pay him on account of the non-delivery of a pair of trousers. The trousers were sent to the tailor to be pressed for Applebaum's wedding, and as they were not returned in time, Applebaum claims he was unable to appear for the ceremony, and his bride-to-be sued him for breach of promise.

EXIT THE SILKWORM

MOST OF THE SILK TO BE MADE HERE—AFTER FROM WOOD FIBER.

A New and Important Industry That Has Proved Successful in France—The Process Soon to be Put Into Operation in This Country.

Artificial silk making in this country during the year 1897 is, apparently, an assured fact. Already in France and England the process is being tried with success. For years, however, what is now an accomplished fact, was looked upon as the modern inventor's philosopher's stone. Scientists by the hundred spent fruitless years in resultless efforts to the manufacture of wood silk. At last, where so many other and greater men had failed, Count Hillare de Chardonnet discovered the secret. The story of M. de Chardonnet's invention is almost a romance. The worthy count, born in the silk-growing districts of the Rhone, became a graduate of the Parisian ecole polytechnique, and eventually a knight of the Legion of Honor. This accomplished, he retired on his laurels to his native Lyons, where he spent many days in philosophical meditations. On a certain sultry afternoon, while sitting in his park and carelessly munching a strip of bark from one of the trees he noticed the fibrous character of the scrap of white rind. From this a rapid train of thought brought him to the crude idea of the subsequent great invention. Thereafter the count shook off his habits of sloth, abandoned his woodland siestas, and devoted his life to the procuring of silk from wood. Obstacles in shoals barred his way, but the count was a man of courage and perseverance. After years of labor he succeeded in perfecting an invention which is really a mechanical and chemical marvel. The product of M. de Chardonnet's machinery is pronounced by the experts to be "a beautiful silk, equaling in brilliancy, fineness and softness of texture that of the silkworm." In 1891 the count founded a company to work his scheme, and already the enterprise has proved a commercial success. Great opposition naturally came from the millions of silkworm cultivators in central France, who viewed the new invention much as the hand-loom spinners of England looked upon the spinning jenny. But the silk buyers were in Chardonnet's favor. For centuries they had been dependent upon the grub and its state of health, generally precarious, for their silk crop. Now, when one remembers that the silk-

NEWS FROM THE COUNTRY.

PINE GROVE.

Owing to the rain of last week the roads are in a bad condition.

Farmers are busy drawing logs and cordwood.

Miss Bertha Hicks, of McDonald, and Mr. Manson Hughes, of Prince Edward, were visiting at Mr. Jas. Wagar's on Monday of last week.

Miss Estella and Miss Amelia Wagar spent Sunday at McDonald the guests of Mrs. Wm. E. Miller.

The school is progressing favorably under the management of Miss Ida Johnston.

Miss Ella Richardson spent Sunday at her sister's, Mrs. Geo. Burth.

Mr. Archie Dunwoodie and wife are moving back on the farm again and Mr. John Dunwoodie has removed to Albert.

TAMWORTH.

Rev. J. J. Rae formerly of Napanee preaches in the Methodist church here next Sabbath morning and evening. He delivers his lecture on "Mind your own Business" on the Monday following in the town hall. This lecture has been given by Mr. Rae forty-six times within six months. Instead of the annual tea, the people are heartily supporting a direct contribution this year which is to be given next Sabbath. This is a commendable move and will no doubt meet with success.

A touching reference was made to Mrs. Alex. Rose's useful services in the Methodist S. S. Mr. and Mrs. Rose leave for Napanee this week. Their many friends here regret their departure and wish them every success.

BATH.

Among the many historical reminiscences that the public have been treated to lately, many amusing evidences have been brought forth, as for instance. A writer thought it necessary to give the dimensions of the fishes throat to settle the fact as to whether Jonah was actually engulfed or not. Another writer lately has mixed two wars together to prove that Bath soldiers took refuge in Mr. Joseph Hawley's woods to escape Bill Johnston's Tail Boat in 1812 and 1837 the same witnesses would not do from McKintires corners.

The ice houses are being filled preparatory to coming warm weather.

Mr. Max Robinson has imported a fine lot of carriages ready for spring sales.

Mr. M. C. Davy has commenced the erection of a new dwelling on the site devastated by fire a few years ago.

We are glad to note that Mr. John Chapman is still mending in health.

We regret to learn of the death of Mr. Bridon Fleming who was placed in the vault yesterday.

FREDERICKSBURG.

This week's storms have spoiled our good roads. George J. Perry is shipping hay and straw to supply a local demand. The business in this line is very much below that of years previous.

A Ryder, late engineer at the oil well, has moved back to Verona again.

Miss Mina Schell is visiting friends at her former home, Syracuse, N. Y.

Mrs. J. J. Smith is spending a few days

NAPANEE MILLS.

Artemus Granger, of Dakota, is home visiting his sister, Mrs. Peter McPherson, who still remains quite ill.

Levi Williamson, who has been in charge of Mr. Madden's farm in Minnesota, arrived home with Mr. Granger. He is quite ill.

James Somerville is ill with pneumonia.

Rev. Mr. Limbert, Selby, preached in the Methodist church on Sunday.

Irvin Gallen, of Trenton, who has been visiting his sister, Mrs. McColl, returned home on Monday.

PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY.

Dr. Kane, Picton, has been very ill with a gripe.

Master Frank Moore, son of Levi F. Moore, Napanee, is spending a few weeks with relatives in Sophiasburgh.

Quite a large number from Picton and vicinity, attended the races at Bath, last week.

Mr. and Mrs. David Benson, have removed to Napanee. We wish them success in their new home.

Mr. Elias Slater, Yereville, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Max. Robinson, Bath, one day last week.

Surprise, and dancing parties are all the rage and the young people have no cause to complain of lack of entertainment this winter.

These are days when the men in the rural districts congregate at the blacksmith shop or village grocery to play checkers, tell stories and discuss the probability of war in Europe. Can a man talk on such occasions? If you doubt it just stop at the first grocery you come to, some rainy afternoon, and you will be filled with wonder that women have been credited with being the gossips par excellence.

Mr. Aich Harrison has rented his farm at Cressy and intends removing with his family to Toronto.

The farmers of this County intend sowing large quantities of spring wheat instead of peas of the different Seed Companies, as they have done heretofore. In fact it is rumored that one of the large companies will shortly remove their offices to Michigan.

Picton has now a "Young Liberal Club" with a full staff of officers, and judging from the reports we have read of its enthusiastic meetings, it surely prefigures success for the Liberal party in this county—the home of so many staunch supporters of the good cause.

One of the most absurd pleas put up for the N. P. was that it protected the workmen and helped to keep up wages. Wages are regulated by the number of persons seeking employment. Competing labor has always been on the free list. All the N. P. ever did for the workmen was to increase the cost of living.

SAUNDERS, a deputy-returning officer in the Macdonald election, has been found guilty of ballot stuffing. He should be summarily dealt with. Offenses of this character have been

There are other provisions and restrictions which militate against the license holders but still the temperance people are not happy. Nothing short of the closing up of every barroom in the country, the annihilation of every brewery and the wholesale destruction of every drop of "O Be Joyful" in the Dominion will satisfy the leaders of the temperance cause. The action of the Ontario Government is characterized "an outrage," "A slap in the face," "A downright insult," "A perfect mockery," etc, by the heated members of Ontario Alliance. One warlike lady is in favor of showing the Government "their claws," or "the claw," we are not sure which. The officials of the Dominion and Ontario Alliance are no doubt wonderfully clever people. Still the country is not in the mood to give them carte blanche to run the government and regulate the diet of the nation. The amendments to the License Act may be inadequate, they may be an insult, a mockery and an outrage to the feelings of the Ontario Alliance, still there is another side to the question. Had the Government granted the demands of the Alliance the present tempest in a teapot wouldn't be a comparison to the hornet's nest they would have raised about their ears. Any prohibitory law which has not the moral support of the people at its back will prove futile. Until the rank and file are educated up to the pitch of the Ontario Alliance and view the indulgence in intoxicating liquors as a mortal sin, a prohibitory law will prove abortive. You can't make people sober by act of parliament and any legislation calculated to restrict the liberty of the subject is apt to be resented. The millennium for which temperance people hope can only be reached by degrees. Forge the chain link by link, as popular sentiment demands it, and it will prove effective. Anything of a revolutionary nature is more apt to retard than assist the suppression of the liquor evil for which all good citizens hope.

A Brickmaker Listens to Reason—Uses Six Boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills and tells it.

Brockville, Mar. 8 (Special)—Mr. W. H. Odell perhaps one of the best known citizens of this town has lately recovered from a long continued and painful kidney ailment. He tells the story of his experience to the correspondent as follows:—

"I have suffered for over a year from kidney disease, the pain in my back being so severe that I was unable to stand to my work."

"Noticing the published cures of what Dodd's Kidney Pills were doing for others I concluded to use them."

"Having used only six boxes I can say that I am perfectly cured and well so that I can attend to business as well as ever I could."

They proved that the doctor was mistaken in saying that heart disease could not be cured. Since I commenced taking Murre's Heart and Nerve Pills I have been daily getting better. I can now go upstairs without trouble and attend to my daily duties without the slightest distress. I have gained in flesh, in health and in strength. My blood circulates more freely. Lying on my left side causes me no inconvenience or pain, and I enjoy health and restful sleep. My nerves are strong and vigorous, and there has been such a radical change for the better in my condition that I can say these wonderful pills have practically made a complete cure. I commend them without the slightest hesitation to all sufferers from similar complaints. (Signed) Mrs. Jas. Graham, Hamilton, Ont.

A Place of Love

A good Christian home with its love and prayer and all its gentle influence is almost heaven to a child. It is a place of shelter—the storms are not allowed to blow there too rudely. It is a place of holy teaching. There never come again such lessons as those which fall upon the ears of infancy and childhood from the lips of a Christian mother. It is a place of love—there is no other such love in the world as that which warms a true home. Those who live in such homes have immeasurable opportunities of good. Yet too often are the influences resisted. Then by and by the door is shut. The heart that made the home is still and cold in death. The gentle hand that wrought such beauty and good is folded on the breast. Many a man in mid-life would give all he has to creep back for one hour to the old sacred place; to hear again his mother's voice in counsel or prayer; to feel once more the gentle touch of her hand and to have her sweet comfort. But it is too late. The door is shut.

Looking Backward and Forward.

Absolute forgetfulness of the past is an impossibility to a man in the right use of his faculties. Nothing dies in the soul. A thought once struck out, an emotion once experienced, passes into the permanent furnishing of our inner and immortal being. The apostle Paul could not forget the past of his life. How it comes out again and again, like a minor refrain. Yet practically he did forget the past, he did leave it behind. It was but a fugitive look he gave to the sad and guilty days that were gone. The look intent was before. So we are to forget the past if it has been an inglorious one. There must be no useless meaning, no paralysis of the will. That past cannot be unmade or recalled. Give it a swift look of regret. Then, with the purpose of the Olympian runner—on to the future. The future is yours and mine—radiant, sublime, glorious.—Bishop Fallows.

Watchword of Christianity.

The great watchword of Christianity should no longer be, "What shall I do to be saved?" but rather, "What can I do to save others?" The world must be saved by you and by me, and by the spirit of Christ in us all. The non-church-going masses have nothing to do with us because of a feeling that we lack sympathy with what they hold to be the real things of life. These people, drifting to eternity without guidance and life, can only be reached by showing a fellow feeling for them. We must ourselves be ready to face facts as they exist. The perspective with a charitable texture of soul sheds a diviner luster on the throne of white than does that one who can label creeds.—Rev. Dr. Vrooman.

Sow the seed in a hot bed or cold frame about the middle of April. It will be ready for picking out into rows 2 inches apart each way about a month later. If it is not picked out the young plants should be cut back to give stockiness. In the experiment the plants were set out on June 27th. Hot bed frames were used, additional soil being added till a covering of 6 to 8 inches was laid over the row well settled manure. The plants were set approximately 7x7 inches apart. They grew somewhat slowly at first, but soon covered the ground and made a vigorous growth till arrested by autumn frost. The sides of the frames were 12 inches high; these furnished the requisite amount of shade. The early variety were well blanched when taken up, while the late kinds needed further blanching to make them suitable for market, though they were in good condition for cellar or pit storing. LILLIAN NORDICA TO WOMEN.

Health-giving Paine's Celery Compound the Best Spring Remedy.

Mme. Nordica has the distinction of being the first prima donna born in the United States.

She testifies to the wonderful health-giving effects of the greatest product of medical science—Paine's Celery Compound. Not since Christine Nilsson has there been a Marguerite to be compared to Nordica's splendid impersonation.

All her achieved success had for a foundation the most unrelaxing study and effort. No one knows better than the applauded prima donna what such severe work means to the nerves and strength. The following letter from Lillian Nordica to Wells & Richardson Co., must be gratefully read by hosts of women:

"It certainly gives me great pleasure to testify to the health-giving effects of Paine's Celery Compound. I truly believe it to be the best of all spring remedies."

If the winter has left you weak and languid, Paine's Celery Compound will restore strength to your nerves, will purify the blood and make you well. Don't allow nervous debility to go on. Take warning from dyspepsia, nervous headache and sleeplessness. Guard against that tired, played-out feeling that so often appears as spring approaches. Neuralgia and rheumatism—awful enemies—must be conquered.

Paine's Celery Compound is the world's true disease banisher, renovator of the system, and a life giver at this time of the year. It quickly furnishes nutriment for the innumerable nerve fibres; it arouses the organs of digestion and assimilation to brisker action; it enables the wasted body to build up flesh and muscle, and dissipates every fearful and apprehensive feeling.

Paine's Celery Compound is truly the medicine for women when weakened and burdened by work and home cares. It gives them fresh new blood, vim, energy and activity, and a new lease of life. Try it, and when you go to your dealer for Paine's Celery Compound, see that you get it; no other medicine can take its place successfully.

HOW TO APPLY MANURE.

A Practical Illustrated Lesson From a Nurseryman's Experience.

It is at once clear that a nursery affords some special advantage in the study of the manure question. Here trees and plants are dug up at their feeding stage, in a way that hardly obtains with another crop. One can see what an apple tree or strawberry plant likes to feed upon and in what shape, as is not likely to be the case with a cabbage or a tree in the orchard, which are not dug from the earth.

Many years ago I learned a lesson in the application of manure. It was A Circus Farm.

The "glorious climate of California" is being put to a new and interesting use. A man has purchased 500 acres in Merced County, and intends to add to it 500 more, not for the raising of fruit, but for an experiment in the breeding of elephants, hippopotami, lions, tigers, llamas, nilgaws, kangaroos and other tropical and exotic animals, such as are in common demand for purposes of exhibition. He already has a considerable stock of these creatures.

His design is to obtain the conditions suited to every sort of animal used for exhibition, and he thinks that he can come nearer to realizing these conditions in California than anywhere else. The elephants require a secluded jungle, and this properly fenced, so that they cannot get out, is to be provided for them.

Sections of the jungle will be fenced off with a wire barrier 16 feet high for the tigers, which, with their offspring, will be made at home here when the weather is warm, and can be moved indoors when it is too cold for them in the woods. The kangaroos, nilgaws, zebras, camels, quails and llamas will find in properly sheltered portions of this California ranch conditions of life not greatly unlike those in the countries to which they are indigenous.

The proprietor is to make an experiment of raising camels on a large scale, and they and the llamas will be taught to bear burdens, as they do in their native countries. A flock of kangaroos will be turned loose. It is regarded as likely that they will find themselves even more at home in California than in Asia.

Why the Trip Was Put Off

"Ah, Professor," greeted the student, "I hear that you are about to make a trip to San Francisco."

"You are misinformed, sir," the Professor answered. "From motives of economy I have decided to postpone the trip until winter."

"You see," the pedagogue explained, "taking advantage of one of the great laws I expound in the natural philosophy class every day, I find that the trip can be shortened in cold weather. The principle involved is that law which relates to the expansion and contraction of metals. I find that a steel rail thirty feet in length contracts one-quarter of an inch with the cold. At the rate of 17 1/2 rails to the mile in a distance of 3000 miles I make just about two miles and a quarter by traveling in winter."

"Quite a saving, Professor," said the student, and he walked on silently marvelling at the learned one's sagacity.

"That's what they told me."
"Young man, I like your looks, and I like your manners, and I'm going to be a friend to you. I hate to have that debt knocking around my accounts, but for your sake I'll put up with it. If I were to pay up, the chances are ten to one that your firm would find collections so easy that they would discharge you, and then I should never forgive myself."—Washington Star.

BEAUTY AND HEALTH TO FAIR WOMEN.

Miss Annie Patterson, of Sackville, N. B., Once the Victim of Nervousness and General Debility, Takes on the Health of Early Years.

Some remedies are nothing more than a temporary stimulant, and the reaction aggravates the disease. Where the system has become run down, and nervous debility in its worst forms have shown themselves, South American Nervine will cure. It strikes at the nerve centres and builds up the system by removing the real cause of trouble. Miss Annie Patterson of Sackville, N.B., a lady well-known in the Maritime Provinces, suffered terribly from indigestion and nervousness, and her case seemed incurable. She accepted South American Nervine without hope that it was any different to other remedies, but her words are, "I had taken only one bottle when my system began to take on the health of earlier years, and after taking three bottles I was completely cured." Sold by A. W. Grange & Bro.

A Radical Change. Mrs. Jas. Graham, Hamilton, Ont., says: "My doctor said that my heart trouble could not be cured, but I am happy to say he was mistaken, for Midway Heart and Nerve Pills have made a complete cure in my case. I have now no heart pains, sleeplessness, flat rim or breathlessness, and am entirely restored to health and vigor."

A LESSON IN MANURING.

When, as a boy in my father's nursery, I began to take a hand in the operations. We purchased from a tannery a large pile of compost, hair, ashes, lime and other refuse, with enough bark in layers to make all pile up well. In the winter we drew this on land devoted to nursery and other crops, usually plowing it under in the spring. Sometimes on fall-plowed land we would incorporate the mixture with the soil, by the use of the cultivator or share harrow, in the spring.

One of the things that vividly impressed me as we dug trees and plants from soil thus manured was the way in which rootlets would lay hold of congenial bits of plant food, the tufts and felted knots of hair would be the attraction to a mass of small roots. This is illustrated in the accompanying sketch, in which A A A shows bunches of hair. This thing was seen not only in the case of seedling and tree roots, but also in those of strawberry plants, which lie much nearer the surface.

A lesson to be drawn from this is that the plowing in of manure as a method of applying it should not yield to surface applications in any marked degree. We meet with persons who say that the surface application of manure is the more rational method, because the strength of the manure can only go one way, namely, downwards to the roots. The activity of which roots seek out and lay hold of particles of manure in the case stated showed to me that there can be no mistake in putting the plant food right where it will be needed.

With the surface application of manure in the fall and winter there is often great loss of fertility through escape by leaching and surface drainage during thaws in the winter. If it be drawn to the plat and be kept in piles until just before the spring plowing or cultivating, such loss is not appreciable.

In the frequent trips I make past some of the most successful market gardens of Buffalo I have often wished that the young men throughout the country who aspire to be successful market gardeners could be impressed by the two fundamental planks of success witnessed here, namely, the most liberal annual manuring and the most perfect tillage. These two things accomplish wonders for the produce garden. ELLIAS A. LONG.

Honest Horse Trader.

Swapping horses, it is said, is of all trades the most trying to men's honesty. Men who can deal squarely under ordinary circumstances yield to the temptation to get the best of a bargain when it is a question of horse-flesh. Hence it is a pleasure to read the following anecdote, which proves the exception to the rule:

Two gentlemen of Marshallton, Va., whom for convenience we call Mr. A. and Mr. S., met one day and agreed to swap horses.

"I'll tell you what, John," said Mr. A., "if you get the best of the trade you shall bring me two bushels of wheat to bind the bargain, and if I come out best, I'll do the same by you, eh?"

"That's a go," said Mr. S., "and I 'low you'll bring me the wheat." "That's as it may be," retorted Mr. A. "But let it be agreed, then, that a week from this afternoon the one's that's best suited, be it you or me, shall give 't'other two bushels of wheat."

The week passed, the day came, and as luck would have it, Mr. A. and Mr. S. met on the road about midway between their respective homes.

"Where to, John?" cried Mr. A., as they stopped a moment to chat.

"To your house with the two bushels of wheat," replied Mr. S.

"Well, now, that's good," remarked Mr. A., "for I was on my way to your house on the same errand. This horse you let me have can't be beat."

"Just what I think of this nag," retorted Mr. S., and then they had a hearty laugh, and separated after exchanging wheat.

AN IMPORTANT LETTER

SHOWING HOW A SUFFERER FROM SCIATICA WAS CURED.

A Correspondent of the Orillia News-Letter With Permission From the Author Makes the Letter Public—It Will be Gladly Read by Other Sufferers From This Painful Malady.

From the Orillia News-Letter.

The following letter has been forwarded us by the Coldwater, Ont., correspondent of the News-Letter, which we have great pleasure in publishing:—

COLDWATER, SEPT. 25th, 1896.

A few weeks ago I became very unwell from an attack of sciatica, and remembering that a while ago a well known friend of mine, Mr. C. T. Hopson, of Fesserton, a few miles from here, had been a great sufferer from this painful complaint, I thought it would be well to consult that gentleman as to the medicine he gives credit to for his relief and cure, as I was aware that he was now well and hearty and had ever since been in steady work among lumber—his regular business. He gave me the information required, and wrote out the following testimonial which he desires to have published in anyway I think proper, hoping that it will meet the eye of many sufferers like myself who are anxious to get relief. I therefore forward it to you to publish.—

FESSERTON, SEPT. 18th, 1896.

It is with the greatest pleasure that I testify to the marvellous benefit and cure that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills effected in my case. In the year 1892 I was taken very bad with sciatica. I was treated at different times by two doctors but dispensed with their services as I found I was not getting the hoped for relief. I then tried different remedies advertised as a cure for sciatica, but no better result. Then I tried strongly recommended electrical appliances, but still to no purpose. I did not improve any and the pain was excruciating, and I began to lose all hope of ever getting better. I could not sit down or move about without suffering intense pain, and the only relief I could get was when I lay down with my legs stretched straight out and then the pain was somewhat less. I was in this position one day when I picked up a newspaper lying by my side and there I read of a man cured of sciatica by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Always having but little faith in proprietary medicine, and in view of the experience I already had, I would not have tried them but for the fact that my wife insisted on going at once and procuring some. She got a box and persuaded me to take them. By the time I had finished the box I believe I felt better, so I kept on taking the pills and by the time I had taken six boxes I was entirely cured. I had been laid up for four months before taking the Pink Pills, and I shall continue to take them occasionally as I know them to be an excellent medicine. I shall never cease recommending them. Yours truly,

CHARLES T. HOPSON.

Our correspondent adds that this letter is from a much respected resident of Fesserton, whose word is generally considered as good as his bond.

THERE ARE NO DEAD.

There is no death! The stars go down,
To rise upon some fairer shore,
And bright in heaven's jeweled crown
They shine forevermore.

There is no death! The dust we tread Shall change beneath the summer showers,
To golden grain or mellow fruit,
Or rainbow-tinted flowers.

There is no death! An angel form
Walks o'er the earth with silent tread;
He hears our best loved things away;
And then we call them—dead.

Born into that undying life,
They leave us but to come again;
With joy we welcome them—the same,
Except in sin and pain.

And ever near us, though unseen,
The dear immortal spirits tread;
For all the boundless universe,
Is life! There are no dead.

A BOLD, BAD BURGLAR

"Isn't it perfectly dreadful? It seems there is no place secure from them.
The papers contain nothing but burglaries, robberies and hold-ups. I am almost afraid to look under the bed at night."

Blanche Warden turned the rings on her fingers nervously as she spoke. She was not a timid girl, but the final test of bravery had never come to her.

"What would you do in case a burglar entered your room, Mr. Dulano?"
she asked, addressing one of her callers.

"Exactly what I did last night," the gentleman replied.

"You surely didn't have a burglar last night!" Blanche cried.

"And why not?" I'm keeping the affair quiet because I have a clew that is being followed up. Of course, it will be safe to mention it here," Dulano replied.

"To be sure, do tell us about it,"
the girl said eagerly.

"It must have been about 2.30 o'clock this morning when I was aroused by some one turning a key in the door that communicates with the adjoining room. I'm pretty stupid when I first awaken; but I was soon aroused to full consciousness by something cold against my temple."

"Oh, how dreadful!" Blanche cried, shivering.

"That wasn't the dreadful part," Dulano laughed. "The part I object it was peacefully reposing on the dressing table in her father's room.

The man was tall and wore a black mask. He must be the same one who had visited Mr. Dulano and Arthur the night before. Perhaps it was Arthur. At the thought of her lover the blood went coursing through her body and to her astonishment, she found that she was calm.

"Are you awake?" the burglar whispered, and his voice sounded strangely familiar.

"Yes," she said, faintly.

"Then get up. Don't be afraid. I am not going to harm you. I only want the family jewels. Take me to where they are kept," he whispered again.

At the sound of that voice the last vestige of fear left her. Indignation and outraged feeling smothered every other emotion in her heart. She would prove this lover of hers. Without a moment's hesitation she arose from her bed, glanced indifferently at the glittering barrel of the revolver in the burglar's hand, and walked over to the table, where she lit her little emergency lamp.

held his gun calmly with one hand while he went through my clothes and helped himself to my watch, my diamond scarf pin and all my ready money.

"At what time did you say that occurred?" Arthur Forrest asked.
"Well, I didn't have any watch to tell me the exact time; but after I had lain awake some three or four hours the chimes on Pilgrim Church sounded the three-quarter hour, and after an equally long time the clock struck three," Dulano replied, with a comical drawl.

"Guess it was watches he was after. He got mine at about the same time. Wonder if he visited any of the other fellows at our house?" Forrest said.
"What! the burglar was in your room too, Arth—Mr. Forrest?" Blanche cried.

"Yes, but he had the kindness to let me sleep until he got what he wanted. He awakened me as he went through the window," the young man replied.

"Oh, please don't tell me any more," Blanche exclaimed. "You will have me so frightened. And I have to stay in this great house with no one but the servants. You know poor Leona is very ill and papa and mamma were called to Chicago to-day, so I am alone." Miss Warden said with some uneasiness.

"Really, Blanche, it isn't safe for you to stay here alone," Arthur said, seriously.

"Oh, I'm not afraid. I'll put the jewels and plate in the big chest in the wine cellar and sleep with a revolver under my pillow. It would be real fun to have a burglar come," Blanche replied, laughing.

Then they dismissed that terror-inspiring theme from their conversation; but Arthur continued restless and uneasy. He stood at the window and sang. As Dulano turned the music for her, he whispered softly:

"Slip into the library a moment. I have something important to say to you." Then he said, aloud: "I think I shall take a smoke in the library, if I may be excused."

When he had left the room Blanche walked over to the deep bay window and laid her hand gently on Arthur's arm. "What makes you so silent this evening, dear?" she asked, tenderly.

"Oh, Blanche, I hate that Dulano. I suppose I am jealous, but I wish you wouldn't have him hanging around here," he exclaimed, while his handsome face crimsoned.

"But, Arthur, you brought him here before you ever spoke of love to me. Surely you are not afraid of him now that you have my promise," the girl said, seriously.

"No, dearest, I do not doubt you. I felt sorry for him, a stranger, there at the boarding house. And besides I wanted him to meet the sweetest woman in St. Louis," he whispered, as he pressed just to suggestion of a kiss on her cheek.

"By the way, I'll go and hunt up that Harper for you, dear," he said, with an effort at spontaneity that was not altogether a success. Then she left the drawing-room; walked half way up the stairs, descended softly and slipped into the library. Dulano was at her side in an instant.

"I'm sorry you spoke of the jewels and things," he said. "I have reason to think Forrest is the burglar. He has been losing heavily at cards lately and is in danger of losing his position at the bank," he whispered, hurriedly.

At the mention of Arthur's name Blanche would have cried out, but the man placed his fingers deftly over her lips. As soon as the speech was ended she fled to her room, hunted up the magazine and returned to the drawing-room. The two men were glaring at each other in angry silence when she entered.

"This call promises to be a game of freeze-out, so I guess I will leave and give you a chance to help Miss Warden put away the silver," Mr. Dulano said in a faintly sarcastic tone to Forrest.

"If Miss Warden desires my help I shall certainly remain," Arthur said, angrily.

"I shall require no assistance whatever," the girl said, haughtily, and the two men departed together. For some minutes she sat in the dressing-room, sad and sore. Arthur Forrest, a gambler, perhaps a burglar! No, it could not be. And yet, why had he been so moody of late? Her heart was sore and, with no thought of the valuables in the house, she dragged herself to bed. The night wore on and sleep came. The clock was just striking the hour of three when the door opened slowly and she could see the shadowy outline of a man. For a moment she was paralyzed with terror. The scream that started from her heart lost itself somewhere in her throat. A thousand awful fancies chased each other through her mind, as the man advanced to the bed. Then she thought of the revolver that she had

Then she led the way through the corridor and down the back stairway to the laundry and cellars. Blanche, in her indignation, knew not that the granitoid floor was cold beneath her little bare feet. When she had almost reached the wine cellar, she remembered that the key was on her father's keyring, and was probably at that time in Chicago. An idea struck her. "Here; you hold the lamp while I climb up and get the key," she said, indicating a niche high in the wall. The man's eyes followed her glance, and he was lost. As quickly as thought she blew out the lamp, buried it in resounding fragments on the floor and sprang upon her burglar like a tiger. The revolver was hers without a struggle and the man was her prisoner. "Are you Arthur Forrest?" she cried. "I'll blow your brains out!" she cried. "My God, spare me, Blanche! I'm Arthur," the man whispered.

She covered him with the revolver, while she backed across the laundry. When she had gained the stairs she belted the door securely and fled trembling to the hall above. At the library door she halted, and a low cry escaped her lips as she caught sight of another man in the open window.

"Blanche, my darling, are you safe?" Arthur Forrest cried, as he beheld her white-robed figure.

"How did you escape? I thought the outer door was locked," she said, as she repelled his touch.

"Escape!" the young man cried in astonishment. "I have been following him since midnight. One of my men, who was left here to guard the house, tells me that he entered this window ten minutes ago. The fellow was afraid to follow him alone. I have tracked him from Broadway and twice he evaded me. Where is he, darling?"

"Who—who is it you are looking for?" the girl gasped.

"Wallace Dulano. The officers are here to arrest him. Is he still in the house?" Arthur asked, eagerly.

"There is no way of escape except up the pantry stairs," Blanche replied.

Then, while Arthur let the officers in, she slipped away to her room and donned her dressing gown and slippers. In a few minutes she joined her fiancé in the reception hall. The gas was burning brightly now and she could hear the heavy tread of men as they took their prisoner from her impromptu jail.

"You are a brave little woman," Arthur said, fondly, as he led her to a divan.

"No, I am a miserable coward; but I am a proud woman, and when a woman thinks she has been wronged, fire and storm cannot stop her," Blanche said, humbly.

"What do you mean by that, dearest?" the lover asked.

"Oh, Arthur, he lied to me and I believed him. He told me that you were the burglar and I thought you were using even my love to further your own wicked ends. That is why I had courage to walk downstairs at the end of a revolver. Can you ever forgive me for cherishing such an ignoble thought?" she cried as she buried her face on his breast.

"Yes, my darling," the young man said, tenderly. "But I have stolen something that is of infinitely more value than your plate and jewels. I have stolen this noble heart, and I am willing to admit that I am a bold, bad burglar."

IN MANY SECTIONS THIS SORT OF CONCRETE DISPLACES MASONRY.

Illustrations of the Idea of the Plan and the Appearance of Such Work - A Practical Description of How the Work is Done.

In many sections cement concrete has largely displaced expensive masonry and revolutionized the construction of barn walls, floors and other farm structures during late years. With the use of Queenston and other good cements for the above purposes hundreds of farmers are now familiar and thoroughly satisfied. A little has also been done in cheapening the cost of building culverts and other road structures of the sort by municipalities instead of using the more expensive and often unsatisfactory sewer pipes or large tiles. It is a matter that municipal authorities and others would certainly do well to investigate. The accompanying illustrations give an idea of the plan and appearance of such work. They represent a concrete arch over a small stream in the Township of Gosfield, near Kingsville, Ont. The work was laid out and superintended by Mr. Isaac Usher of Thorold, Ont., who, we understand, is giving his services freely in that respect. Queenston cement and coarse gravel were used in the proportions of one of the former to four of the latter. Mr. Usher has written us the following description of how the work was done, which will be of service to others:

The foundations for bench and wing walls were excavated about three feet below the bed of the stream to very hard, solid clay, so there is no danger of the scour of the stream undermining the foundations. The footings for bench and wing walls are four feet wide and about eighteen inches in thickness, made of coarse lake gravel, mixed four parts gravel and one part cement. This mixture was well mixed before putting in any water, then only enough water used to slightly moisten; then put in layers about six inches thick, and rammed solid with iron rammers. When footing foundations were finished then the walls were laid out three feet wide in the centre of footings and built about four and a half feet wide to the spring line of half circle arch, then wooden centres were placed in position and covered with two by four inch scantlings, dressed on both sides so as to be even in thickness, edges levelled to fit neatly the radius of circles, so when centres were removed the inside of arch was absolutely smooth, having a finish almost as smooth as a well-plastered wall. The arch and wing walls were all carried up together. The thickness of concrete wing over the arch is fifteen inches wide, on each side of arch; this was done by setting up a fifteen-inch plank on edge each side the whole length of the arch. The planks were firmly braced to the wooden centres so the concrete could be firmly rammed. When the planks were filled on each side, then the wing walls were built up to the same height, then planks were moved on the arch another fifteen inches and filled again as before, until the structure was completed, leaving the planks, in all cases, not less than half a day before moving them. When the arch was turned, the wing and parapet walls on the sides were built up about one foot above the arch to retain the earth and gravel over the arch. The earth and gravel was filled up in the centre about one foot above the wing and parapet walls and sloped neatly to the edge of all walls. All walls were built on the inside next to the earth with a frost batter; that is, sloping about one quarter of an inch to the foot, raised so that the earth rests on the walls. In no case should back of walls rest on the earth; if so, the frost will surely destroy them, and it is always important that wing walls should be made strong to protect them against the thrust of the earth when frozen; this is an important matter, and is often lost sight of. Bridges and culverts of all kinds and sizes can be built over

The murderer who, at dead of night, creeps stealthily out to bury the dead and mangled body of his victim inspires men with horror and dread. There is a murderer abroad who yearly slays one-sixth of all the human race who go down to untimely deaths. This dread monster is called consumption. The approach of consumption is slow and insidious. First there is a slight disorder of the digestion. The appetite is poor and the nourishing properties of the food are not properly assimilated. The blood becomes thin and impure. The body begins to starve. Old tissues of the body are not properly replaced by new. The lung tissues are not properly nourished and are inert and half dead. In this condition they offer a good soil for the germs of consumption which invade and attack them.

This operation is promptly reversed by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It invigorates the digestion and appetite and makes assimilation perfect. It builds up and purifies the blood. It makes new healthy tissue to replace the old, inert matter which it causes to be carried off. It drives out all disease germs. Thousands of cases given up as hopeless have been cured. Miss Laura Piersel, of East Bethlehem, Washington Co., Pa., writes: "I must write you telling you of the great benefit derived from the use of your 'Golden Medical Discovery.' Last summer my friends thought I was surely going in consumption, and having tried doctors with satisfactory results and hearing your medicine highly spoken of, I took one bottle. My complaint together with all the distressing symptoms, and in fact the cure seemed almost miraculous to all who saw me."

SLEEP. BALMY SLEEP.

IT IS NO WASTE OF TIME TO GET PLENTY OF IT.

Some Popular Misconceptions That Are Here Cleared Away - The Folly of Early Rising on the Farm - A Notable Instance of Sleep's Virtue.

"God bless the man who first invented sleep!" So Sancho Panza said, and so say I. And bless him also that he didn't keep his great discovery to himself, nor try to make it as the lucky fellow might. A close monopoly by patent right.

Yes, bless the man who first invented sleep. I really can't avoid the iteration. But bless the man, with curses loud and long. What is the reason's name, or age of station? Who first invented and went 'round adoring. That artificial out-off. Early Rising!

I like the lad who when his father thought To slip his morning nap by hickneyed phrase, Or agrant worm by early songster caught, Or Cuckoo served him right it's not at all surprising. The worm was punished. Sir, for early rising?" John G. Saxe.

"I always calculate to get to bed at a reasonable hour every third night; in that way I manage not to waste so much time in sleep," writes a young teacher to one of us, demonstrated with her relative to her favorite vice, late hours. The young lady, with a head full of the wisdom of the books, has failed to draw a just important inference from her knowledge of psychology—or, perhaps, more correctly, to have deduced it an erroneous one. She speaks of sleep as a waste of time. It is rather nature's regenerator and restorer. It is the period for the renewal of exhausted energies, the interval of recuperation, and the release of good sleep as a part of the household morality. A writer, on psychology, says that as is felt in the morning after a restless sleep, so, in the progress of the world, no time spent in the accumulation of such energy can be regarded as wasted.

Dr. Hurd, superintendent of a Buffalo hospital, says that one of the first conditions that precede dementia and disturbance, which lead to insanity and dis-

A TYPICAL BULL OF THE WEST-HIGHLAND BREED OF CATTLE.

Characteristics of These Shaggy, Wide-Horned Cattle With the Long Hair—Their Strong Constitution and General Qualities Subjects of Admiration.

The shaggy, wide-horned cattle, of which a typical example is represented in the accompanying illustration, have from time immemorial had their home in the mountains and glens of Scotland and the islands that cluster along its western shores, where they are supposed to be indigenous, says George A. Martin in Orange Judd Farmer. The cattle of the islands are black and somewhat smaller than many found on the mainland. There they have been greatly improved by selections and crosses, which have resulted in heavier and better cattle, while various shades of brown, red, dun and brindled are not unusual colors among them. They are the hardest of all British cattle, and in their native home a most valuable race. The poor crofter depends largely on them for his subsistence, giving them shelter from wintry storms in his own humble "shilling" with the children. The more prosperous farmer obtains "muckle siller" from his sales at the cattle trysts, and many members of the titled peerage are spirited and successful breeders and feeders of these cattle. One of the most eminent of these, the Earl of Lanthes, writes of them as follows: "I have always wondered at the slowness of American breeders in perceiving the merits of the Highland cattle and their adaptability for the conditions of soil and climate to be met with in the Rocky Mountains. People suppose that the Highland cattle are wild and savage animals, judging them by the appearance of their formidable horns. Wild they may be when allowed to run loose on the hills from calvehood, but when treated like other breeds and handled early they are mostly quiet and amenable. As a rule they are not savage either towards one another or towards man. We have long been in the practice of grazing seventy or eighty steers or heifers in the deer park—animals bought at Falkirk, Doune or other trysts in October and sold in the following year. Speaking from the experience of at least thirty years, there has been only a single case among all these mixed lots of serious injury received by one of the cattle from the horns of another. A common mistake is the notion that this breed is diminutive in size. Doubtless there are very small animals bred in certain poor and inclement districts or originally there derived. In fact, Highlanders of the best sort, such as prevail in the north, herds of the southwestern Highlands are of very commendable size and weight. But their length of hair, depth of rib, and to some extent their general symmetry and liveliness, tend to lessen their apparent size in the eye of the casual observer. Undoubtedly they are of stronger constitution than most other breeds, illness and trouble, including being extremely rare. Boredom, uncommon, and the cows go steadily breeding to comparatively old age. In the matter of keeping their hardiness is well known, they will thrive where cattle of another breed will starve.

This is a favorable but not unduly flattering description of the breed, one eminently capable of judging them. It may be added that the beef is of the finest quality and commands the highest prices in the London market, and the skin, when slaughtered in winter, makes a very valuable article. It is not nearly so close to buffalo skin as it is in many a few years ago. Many of the importations of Highland cattle have been made to this country, mostly by way of Canada. But the breed has never become established here. What it can hold its own against the black-poll kind of oxen, or the better or northernmost ranges of the breed, remains to be tried. But if a few of them can be made to thrive in the still more remote regions of Alaska, they will seem to be the best.

DICTIONARY SNYDER.

An Interesting Character Known to the Students of the Paris Latin Quarter.

Stories of the unique characters that America contributes to the Latin Quarter of Paris, the section in which is to be found the majority of the art students in the gay French capital, are entertainingly told by Mr. Clinton Peters, Charles Snyder, who has lived for the past thirty-one years in Paris, is well known to the students in the Latin Quarter as "Dictionary Snyder." This sobriquet is due to his fund of information. But he is not an artist, but has for years associated with them. Snyder speaks seven languages, has a superior education, which, however, he has seldom been able to turn to advantage so far as his personal benefit is concerned.

"In everything he is a typical Bohemian," said Mr. Peters yesterday, and indifferent to the future, so long as his present is provided for in the present. He is a man of expediency. "At the beginning of the siege of Paris Snyder had but 15 francs, yet he lived on them throughout that long period, when the necessities of life were sold for almost fabulous prices. I asked him once how he managed to survive on such a small sum, and he replied that at the time the siege was announced he resolved to buy a quantity of food that no one else would think of and which would sustain life for a considerable period. Prices were so high that there were very few articles of food that were left to the choice of a limited back-book, but he solved the problem accurately. He bought three bottles of olive oil on the first day when hardly any one of the Parisians thought of such an article of diet, and from day to day purchased small quantities of bread. The oil and bread were mixed together with water and made into a sort of soup, and on this limited though nourishing menu Snyder lived until the siege was nearly ended.

Toward the close of the siege he became extremely weary of his monotonous diet, and resolved on a bold stroke for a change in the bill of fare. So he left the city secretly and walked boldly up to a German picket. Of course he was brought to a halt by the soldier. Then he explained that he was not a Parisian, but an American who was detained in Paris, and a very hungry one at that. He asked permission to enter the German camp, but the soldier told Snyder he had orders to allow no one to pass. Convinced that Snyder meant no mischief, but was really a man in need of provender, he finally consented to become a party to a ruse which he felt a fertile gentleman proposed. This was that Snyder was to take to his heels in the direction of the camp while the soldier, as if in a fit performance of his vigilance, came to fire his gun in the air. It was carried out successfully.

There he was regaled with cheese, butter and other good things, to his heart's content by the Germans, and soon after started to return to Paris. But he had promised the guard who had first arrested his bold intent to return within an hour. Including the booming boom offered him in the camp he had overstay the allotted time, and on returning the outpost found another picket. Explanations followed.

other picket. Explanations followed, and Snyder proposed that he be allowed to run for the gate through which he originally came, while the guard pretended to chase and fire upon him. Again was his scheme agreed to and he re-entered Paris. Once inside the gate the Frenchmen regarded him as one who had achieved a marvelous escape and, as the Germans had done, set before him a bountiful repast.

be had; and where such structures can be properly built, with good cement, they are the cheapest and best that can be built. They do not require skilled labor, consequently the outlay of money is small.—London Farmers' Advocate.

Fertilizing With Electricity.

Mr. Nikola Tesla, the electrical expert and inventor, has recently suggested the possibility of using electricity as a fertilizing agent for the soil. The currents produced by perfected electric oscillators, he says, are capable of causing the chemical combination of the nitrogen with the oxygen of the atmosphere. If this combination were carried on upon an industrial scale, which he thinks is possible, then the product could be used as a fertilizer, and in his opinion the benefits to humanity would be incalculable.

Good Roads and Convict Labor.

It is in the interest of the men themselves as well as of the public that criminals undergoing sentence should be employed at manual labor, says The Toronto World. Such occupation tends to improve the prisoners both mentally and physically. At the same time men convicted of offences against the well-being of society are the very last individuals that the public should be obliged to support. Prisoners convicted of crime should be made to earn their own living. That would seem to be an economic axiom. An occupation that appears to be eminently suited for prison labor is that of road-making. The principal item in the construction of roads is labor, and nine-tenths of it is unskilled labor, which is about the only kind that can be utilized to advantage in the case of the short-term prisoners of the county jails. The question of utilizing the labor of the convicts of York County was brought up the other day in the York County Council on the motion of Councillor Norman that the Government be petitioned for legislation permitting the employment of prison labor on the public roads. While a goodly number of the councillors are in favor of the proposal some object to it on the ground that the employment of the prisoners in this way will interfere with free labor. Prison labor can be used in constructing and improving the roads without infringing in the least on free labor. There is enough work to do in the improvement of our highways to require the services of twice as many men as are now engaged on them. Let the prisoners be employed to supplement the work that is ordinarily done on the public roads. There are seven or eight months in the year during which prison labor could be utilized in this way. The experiment ought to be tried. Gangs of men under competent superintendents should be placed at work on all the principal roads radiating from the city. It seems to us that such a policy would give us the good roads that all classes of the community are so anxious to secure.

which lead to leads to insanity are disorders of sleep. Not always mere insomnia, but other unnatural conditions, such as restless and uneasy sleep, carrying worries through the night, so that one rises unrefreshed and still weary. What will make a person grow old and haggard so fast as some mental trouble or physical pain that precludes sleep? One of the most cruel punishments of medieval times—one that was the very essence of refinement in cruelty—was to prevent a prisoner from sleeping. To keep him awake long hours at a time, allow a short period of repose, then awaken him and compel him to remain awake. The strongest mind and body were alike broken under such treatment.

Those who can sleep soundly and healthfully are almost invariably those who longest retain their vigor and health of body and mind, apparently defying the frosts of time. They have fewer wrinkles and brighter eyes, better complexions and greater youthfulness than those who flit themselves to few hours, or who sleep imperfectly. A person who does not feel the inclination to sleep at the proper time, instead of being well is really not well, for a healthy person has the natural inclination to sleep and eat and drink developed in a strong degree. Eight hours is the average amount, but this varies according to the age, health, temperament and business of the individual. Nine hours is really better than eight. The time should be sufficient for complete rest, whether more or less is required. To rise, still weary with the previous day's toil, and summon a fictitious strength and energy by strong tea or coffee, which will interfere with the next night's restfulness, is to institute a process that wears out the vitality and makes the individual prematurely old.

In this connection one is naturally led to speak of the evils of early rising. One of my most emphatic objections to farm life is the alarmingly early hour at which it is considered necessary to begin the toil of the day. I know all about it, for many and many a time I've watched the cold, gray dawn of a winter's morn melt in daylight as I washed the breakfast dishes before the kitchen window in the "Little Brown House"—but I never did it without a mental, and very likely a verbal, protest. It is unseemly to thus surprise nature on deshabille, as it were, before her morning bath of dew is over and her complexion adjusted for the day; and not all the poets who have written (by lamplight) of the beauties of early morning and the glories of sunrise, nor all the stalwart farmers with whom I have argued the question, have convinced me that it is duty, or even an advantage in the performance of labor, to burn the candle at both ends of the day. The man who rises at a reasonable hour refreshed and revived, can do more work and better work than he who is dragged out of bed still tired and puts in more hours of half-hearted semi-exhausted labor; and it is even more true indoors than out. And I am glad to see that the medical profession is discarding the maxims of Solomon and Benjamin Franklin, and inculcating more sensible views on this subject.

Growing children in particular suffer severely from a curtailment of their proper hours of rest. They require more hours of sleep than grown people, yet often, with a view to inculcating this reprehensible habit of early rising, they are roused out of sound slumber and set to work. An instance came under my observation in this city which illustrates what pernicious results may follow curtailing the hours of sleep of growing children. The son of a once-extensive florist, a growing lad, in his early teens, was an exceptionally dull boy in school. Always at the foot of the class, he failed after the time to pass his examinations for the next grade, and both he and his teachers were thoroughly discouraged. He invariably went to sleep in school hours, and finally one teacher, who was of an investigating turn of mind, set about discovering whether he was a semi-idiot by nature or by circumstance and environment. She found that he was compelled to get up at 4 o'clock every morning, and was kept up at night until 10 o'clock or after; he was growing fast and did not get the sleep he needed. The father, after a frank talk on the teacher's part, which he took very patiently, hired a man to attend to his furnace and let the boy sleep all he pleased. Within a month he was a new boy, both mentally and physically. Instead of being sluggish and dull, he seemed to have awakened to new life. But he had lost valuable time, and he had not formed the habit of mental concentration, so that he always remained a backward student. The instance simply shows how necessary plenty of sleep is to the well-being of the individual.

of potatoes—just clear of the floor, in order to weigh them. A handy device is shown herewith, the working of which can be seen at a glance. Two hooks in the long rope accommodate it for use with low or high articles, while a little hook well up on either rope gives a chance to hook the ends up out of the way when not in use. This device is so easily made that several can be constructed and hung in a number of the farm buildings where it is occasionally necessary to weigh articles.—New York Tribune.

other picket. Explanations followed, and Snyder proposed that he be allowed to run for the gate through which he originally came, while the guard pretended to chase and fire upon him. Again was his scheme agreed to and he re-entered Paris. Once inside the gate the Frenchmen regarded him as one who had achieved a marvelous escape and, as the Germans had done, set before him a bountiful repast.

"Although at many times in the greatest penury, Snyder would never accept regular employment. I know of one offer that was made to him by a New York newspaper to take charge of its cable business at a salary of $3,000 per annum. This offer was promptly declined by Snyder, who said that it involved a certain amount of routine work which would kill him. He was then living on about four cents a day."

"At the time I was spending most of my earlier days in Paris there was an art student for whom Snyder had a particular fondness. He has since risen to prominence, but in those days the student was far from prosperous. There was to be a dinner given at a restaurant celebrated in the Quarter for the excellence of its menu, and, of course, this student I speak of was particularly anxious to go. But he lacked a most important essential. He had no white shirt! Snyder was called into the meeting of condolence that was held, and at once set his inventive genius to work. He pondered, silently for a brief while, but his brow soon lightened and he cheerily asked, 'Have you a collar?'

"The student responded in the affirmative, but announced that he had no tie to wear with it appropriate to the occasion."

"I'll fix that easily," answered Snyder, reassuringly, as he went through the very limited wardrobe of the art student. He fished up a vivid red stocking, and by means of sundry holes cut in the collar and artistic manipulation the flaming stocking was twisted into a very clever imitation of a becoming neckcloth. The effect was satisfactory to all concerned, and the student departed for the dinner in high feather.

"But unfortunately for appearances, and especially for the poor student, as the dinner progressed he forgot that in his shirtless condition it was important to keep his coat closely buttoned, and in an absent moment he loosened that garment and flung the lapels back against his shoulders. You may well conceive what a sensation of sight of the naked breast, culminating in a stocking-hung collar, produced on the company."

"Another instance of Snyder's ingenuity in a desperate strait, and also another instance of the indigence of the same art student, now the head of a great art institution in America, occurred at another social gathering. Such had been the improvement in the student's fortunes that he was able to afford a shirt, but had no studs to ornament the front. Snyder was once more consulted, and, as usual, repaid this tribute to his genius with a ready idea. He cut three black buttons from his shoes and strung them on a heavy thread. The buttons were hung upon the outside of the student's shirt and the thread from the inside held them deftly in place. They presented a respectable appearance, and the student went boldly to take his part in the festivities."

The distinguished litterateur was too fin de siecle to be astonished at a proposition of the kind, but thought it well to make some inquiries as to the peculiar qualities and special advantages of the article he was to praise.

A Peculiar Accident.

Mr. Isaac Taylor, Belleville Road, is, nursing a broken arm received under peculiar circumstances. About two weeks ago he met with an accident to his right arm, but as the pain soon left it he paid no attention to it. All last week, up till Thursday, 4th inst., he worked in his bush, sawing and chopping wood, and although his right arm felt somewhat weak, he experienced no pain from it. On Thursday he felt the bone grating in his right arm and decided to see a doctor. Thursday evening of last week he came to Napanee and interviewed a doctor and discovered that the large bone in his right arm was broken about four inches above the wrist. Mr. Taylor is now carrying his arm in splints, but we hope he will soon regain the use of it. Dr. Demorest, who set Mr. Taylor's arm pronounced it a clean break.

Death of Miss Pringle.

After a lingering illness of about two years' duration Ethel May, eldest daughter of Mr. S. W. Pringle, passed away on Friday morning of last week. Deceased was 22 years and 10 months old and much esteemed by her circle of acquaintances. She was a handsome young lady, and greatly beloved for her many endearing qualities. About two years ago she contracted consumption and all through her long illness exhibited great patience and fortitude. Besides the sorrowing parents, two brothers, Frank and James, and one sister, Nettie, are left to mourn her untimely taking off. The funeral took place on Sunday to the Napanee Cemetery, the large concourse which followed her remains to their last resting place testifying to the esteem in which she was held by all. The following young ladies acted as pall bearers: Libbie Edwards, Mary Briggs, Minnie Grieve, Blanche Grieve, M. Johnston, and Hypatia Fox. The Rev. Dr. McDiarmid conducted the services.

Look Her Husband by the Ear.

The following from the Tweed News is given for what it is worth. "A rather amusing scene took place in one of the bar-rooms at Napanee one evening last week. A young married man, who resides in the southern portion of the town, told his good wife that he was going down street to buy a pair of chickens for their dinner on the following day, and faithfully promised to return early and spend the evening at the fireside. But the good little woman was not to be fooled by the mere promise of chickens, and shortly after her husband left the house she donned her robes and followed in his footsteps. She visited several of the hotels and after awhile located him in the barroom of the Campbell House, where he and two of his chums were about to drink up the chicken money. The sound of his wife's footsteps startled him, and in the excitement he dropped the quarter, which he intended paying for the drinks, on the floor, and in an instant the spy little woman's fingers were upon it and deep down in her pocket she shoved it at the same time telling her husband that this was a pretty way to buy chickens. She then seized him by the ear and walked him to the door, to which ordeal he submitted like a little major, at the same time uttering these words: "I'm not drunk dearie, I'm j-u-s-t-a-l-e-e-p-y." The plucky woman was in the chickens and the bar-tender was out the drinks.

A Lamentable State of Affairs.

The attention of the authorities should be directed to the number of children who make a practice of begging from door to door. In almost every case they tell a pitiful story of want and poverty and end up by giving a fictitious name. From early morning until a late hour at night these children can be found on the street and are growing up ignorant, untruthful and vicious. In several cases parents send their children out to beg and keep them thinly clad for no other purpose than to appeal to the pity of the people. These children are growing up past masters in the art of begging, lying and stealing and there seems nothing before them but a life of crime. Ignorance is the fostering mother of crime and these children are growing up crassly ignorant. Some steps should be taken to put a stop to this misuse of children. There are fathers and mothers in this town who are unfit to be entrusted with the bringing up of children. In the east end of the town there resides a dissolute woman who makes her children go out begging in order to contribute to the comfort of herself and cronies. The children are kept almost naked, although several charitable ladies have given the woman clothes time and again. To dress the children would spoil their utility for begging and the old hag keeps them in a half-naked condition in consequence. She should be either made to change her ways or the children taken from her and placed where they will be properly provided for and educated.

Injunction continued upon terms and undertakings. Costs to be disposed of at the trial. This is an action brought by Jacob Perry, of Michigan, son of the late S. Rombough, of Richmond, against Eliza Pennell to set aside a conveyance of a farm. Perry claims under his mother's will, and above motion was made to prevent Pennell cutting timber on land in dispute. W. G. Wilson is solicitor for plaintiff, Herrington & Warner, solicitors for defendants. The case will be tried at next Assizes here.

Bicycle and Repair Shop.

Fifteen years experience in the bicycle business has given William Normile a good insight into the best lines of wheels and when we learned that he was willing to bank his all on the Massey-Harris bicycle we made up our mind that it was a little above the ordinary. Mr. Normile has opened up a bicycle shop in the East End, one door below Smith's grocery, and has a fine line of bicycles on exhibition. The Massey-Harris, however, is the king bee of the lot, and in point of workmanship and general excellence is a credit to the skill of our Canadian workmen. It is strong, durable and finely finished and possesses all the latest wrinkles and up-to-dateness. The Massey-Harris is well worthy of inspection. Mr. Normile is fully equipped to repair all kinds of wheels, and any one favoring him with a call will find his rates reasonable and his work "up-to-the limit."

Burnt Out Again.

Between three and four o'clock Wednesday morning fire broke out in the large wholesale and retail boot and shoe store of Haines & Lockett, Belleville, and the place is a perfect wreck. The cause of the fire is not known. It started in the second story and spread up and down, involving the wholesale and retail departments, with the exception of a small store-room in the rear. The firm had just placed in their stock of spring goods, the value of which is estimated to be $50,000. The loss on stock by fire, smoke and water will be $40,000; insured for $31,000. There is also an insurance on the building of $5,000, which will nearly cover the loss. The firm also had a large stock of bicycles, which, fortunately, were stored in an adjoining building, and thus escaped damage. The firm was burnt out three years ago, and much regret is expressed at this additional misfortune.

A Successful Tea Meeting.

A highly successful and enjoyable tea meeting was held in the old Lutheran church, Fredericksburgh, on Thursday evening of last week. The edifice was packed to the doors, and all present voted it one of the best entertainments of the season. The edibles provided were of the best, and reflects credit on the cooking abilities of the ladies. There was enough and to spare for two such entertainments, and it is needless to say that ample justice was done to the spread. The literary part of the programme was also of a high order. Mr. M. S. Madole, of Napanee, occupied the chair to the satisfaction of all. Mr. Rockwell, Wm. Rockwell and Joseph Bennett, of Napanee, furnished the musical part of the programme and won high praise for their excellent singing. Excellent addresses were delivered by Rev. Mr. Mallet, of Bath, and the incumbent of the church, Rev. Mr. Pope. Mr. Irish brought down the house with two well rendered recitations, and a recitation by Mrs. Irish was much appreciated also. Miss Susie Latimer, of Napanee, delighted the audience with a well rendered recitation. The proceeds amounted to $50.

With the "Diamond"

Success Is Fully Assured.

The world renowned Diamond Dyes are put up for every color, with special dyes for cotton and all kinds of mixed goods, and are so simple and easy to use that even a child can dye a perfect color with them—colors that will not fade, crock or wash out—equal to the best colors made by professional dyers.

If women are induced to buy imitations of Diamond Dyes they must be prepared for failure and loss of goods.
